

2010 - 2011

CBC Writing Competition

Author: Jiaqi Mei

Spring

Spring days sweeten with the cascading winds

luring and snatching flower petals as they drift into the chilly meadows painted a blush of jade under its blanket of ice that freezes beneath the hands of time and the tears falling from the sky that pummels charcoal pavements and licks the boots of bustling crowds eager to escape

the dreary rainy day.

Artemis and Apollo

When moonlight howls to the wolves quivering below brittle stars, sultry Gemini, the twins of anguish weep
with their bones bleached white.

Quivering below brittle stars,
the throbbing pomegranate suns
with their bones bleached white,
scorch their souls upon the ashes of a chariot.

The throbbing pomegranate suns
deny him mercy, while her arrows remain twisted and bent.
Scorch their souls upon the ashes of a chariot!
Scrape his blade of bone across the dawn!

Deny him mercy, while her arrows remain twisted and bent.
When moonlight howls to the wolves,
scrape his blade of bone across the dawn.
Sultry Gemini, the twins of anguish weep.

X marks the Spot

They uncap the pen
and like the Kraken
it squirts inky x's tainting her with its
black tar

marking the deep crevices
and the smooth hills
smearing the landscape of skin

The needle is rough and the poison seeps through as the tweezers, the scalpel, the sharp edged saw
with its crocodile smile lie in wait to snap, shred, and deceive

The feast begins with the removing, slicing, and slurping of the heavy metal beasts
as the monitor beeps
tentative, then fast

beep, beep,
beeeeeeeeeeeep

she awakens to the blurry reality

Her eyelids drowning in stitches and waxy sticky bandages

blink

a nervous tense pause
emerges
like an air bubble blown by a carp

as they
wait
nervous and unsure

But then she stands
reborn again
they clap, whistling
in awe
at their creation
at the beautiful lady
at the modern day Aphrodite

Candy

I pluck out
the sweetness
and roll my tongue
into a jail cell of
taste

the taste of the passionate sun,
of rainbows
bursting into heavy rain
drops,
and yet it feels as tender as the moon's glow

a glow that burns my cheeks as they flare and strike against my teeth
playing my mouth
like an African
drum.